

UCubes Now Available at Apple Online, Crutchfield, B&H and Other Fine Retail Outlets

Ontario, California • 9/25/2011 • The big story is that the awesome UltraLink® UCube™ Compact USB Digital Speakers are now available at the Apple Online Store \(Shop Mac/Audio & Speakers\), Crutchfield, B&H and other fine retail outlets where they've moving like hotcakes!

"They are also just so darned cute and stylish. Fastened to the included stands, they stared up at me like Pixar's Luxo Jr. I almost expected them to speak on their own."

"Ultralink's UCubes are very handsome with elegantly machined brushed-aluminum tabletop stands and a gloss black (silver, red, and white are also available) lacquer finish. Makes me wish I lived in a sleek office like those seen in Apple commercials, instead of one that looks more like a Booth cartoon."

"The UCubes are always ready to rock. They'd be a solid addition to, and extension of, any laptop. And they're just so cute and stylish!"

"The real advantage of these little speakers is their portability ... elegantly simple good looks; ridiculously simple to set-up; simple good sound for your laptop; and simply a bargain at $149."

"Their wide sound dispersion means you can get good results even in placements that would have other speakers sounding terrible. UCubes break the cycle of boomy, muddy computer speakers and delivers a good dose of audiophile clarity for the price."

"Cool as this tiny pair of UCubes look, what makes them worth plugging into a USB port is digital signal processing that keeps the audio not just flowing sweetly but equalized and matched to what you'd expect on something 3 times the size. If you had X-ray vision, you'd be looking at a full-range, flat diaphragm driver propelling the sound out a full 170 degrees wide."
